About Susan G. Komen Global Race for the Cure

Since its inception in 1990, funds raised from the Susan G. Komen Global Race for the Cure have provided more than $34 million for over 300 community grants to local programs in the National Capital Region that are dedicated to reaching low-income, minority and uninsured women. Currently, the National Capital Region has the highest incidence and mortality rates from breast cancer in the country and all proceeds from the Race stay in the DC community to fight these statistics.

The Susan G. Komen® promise is to save lives and end breast cancer forever.
